As plants ambiguous between sea and land,
The river-horse and scaly crocodile. Milton.
- RIVET. n. f. [river, Fr. to break the point of a thing; to drive.] A fastening pin clenched at both ends.
The armourers accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation. Shakep. Henry V.

ROA

- Thy armour
I'll frush, and unlock the rivets all,
But I'll be matter of it. Shakep. Troilus and Cressida.
- Though Valeria's fair, and though the loves me too,
'Gainst her my soul is arm'd on every part;
Yet there are secret rivets to my heart,
Where Berenice's charms have found the way,
Subtle as lightnings. Dryden's Tyrannick Love.
- The verse in fashion is, when numbers flow
So smooth and equal, that no fight can find
The rivet, where the polish'd piece was join'd. Dryden.
- The rivets of those wings inclos'd Fit not each other. Dryden's Don Sebastian.
- This instrument should move easy upon the rivet. Shap.
- To RIVET. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To fasten with rivets.
This man
If all our fire were out, would fetch down new,
Out of the hand of Jove; and rivet him
To Caucasus, should he but frown. Benj. Johnson.
 2. To fasten strongly; to make immovable.
In riveting, the pin you rivet in should stand upright to the plate you rivet it upon; for if it do not stand upright, you will be forced to set it upright, after it is riveted. Mason.
- You were to blame to part with
A thing stuck on with oaths upon your finger,
And riveted with faith unto your flesh. Shakep.

lings and six-pence sterling. Ditt.
- ROACH. n. f. [from rotulus, Lat. red-haired.]
- A roach is a fish of no great reputation for his dainty taste:
his spawn is accounted much better than any other part of him: he is accounted the water sheep, for his simplicity and foolishness; and it is noted, that roaches recover strength, and grow in a fortnight after spawning. Walton's Angler.
- If a gudgeon meet a roach,
He dare not venture to approach;
Yet still he leaps at flies. Swift.
- ROAD. n. f. [rade, Fr.]
1. Large way; path.
Would you not think him a madman, who, whilst he might easily ride on the beaten road way, should trouble himself with breaking up of gaps?
To God's eternal house direct the way,
A broad and ample road. Milton.
 2. To be indifferent whether we embrace falsehood or truth, is the great road to error.
Could stupid atoms, with impetuous speed,
By diff'rent roads and adverse ways proceed,
That here they might encounter, here unite. Blackmore.
- There is but one road by which to climb up. Blackmore.
2. [Rade, Fr.] Ground where ships may anchor.
I should be still
Peering in maps for ports and roads;
And every object that might make me fear Misfortune to my ventures. Shakep. Merch. of Venice.
- About the island are many roads, but only one harbour. Sandy's Journey.

3. Inroad;

ROA

3. Inroad; incursion.

former road into that country, become famous and rich. Knolles's History of the Turks.
- The king of Scotland, seeing none came into Perkin, turned his enterprize into a road, and wafted Northumberland with fire and sword. Bacon's Henry VII.
4. Journey. The word seems, in this sense at least, to be derived from rade, the preterite of ride: as we say, a short ride;
an easy ride.
With easy roads he came to Leicester,
And lodg'd in the abbey. Shakep. Henry VIII.
- He from the East his flaming road begins. Milton.
- To ROAM. v. n. [romigare, Italian. See Room.] To wander without any certain purpose; to ramble; to rove; to play the vagrant.

South, East, and West, with mix'd confusion roar,
And howl the foaming billows to the shore. Dryden.
 4. To make a loud noise.
The brazen throat of war had ceas'd to roar. Milton.
- Consider what fatigues I've known,
How oft I cross'd where carts and coaches roar'd. Gay.
- ROAR. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. The cry of the lion or other beast.
 2. An outcry of distress.
 3. A clamour of merriment.
Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs?
your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table in a roar? Shakep. Hamlet.
 4. The sound of the wind or sea.
 5. Any loud noise.
Deep throated engines belch'd, whose roar
Imbowel'd with outrageous noise the air. Milton.
- Off on a plat of rising ground,
I hear the far-off curfew sound,
Over some wide-water'd shoar,
Swinging flow with fullen roar. Milton.
- When cannons did diffuse,
Preventing posts, the terror, and the news;
Our neighbour princes trembled at their roar. Waller.
- The waters, list'ning to the trumpet's roar,
Obey the summons, and forsake the shore. Dryden.

- Where champions ruleth the roist. Tusser's Husbandry.
- There dailie disorder is most,
Alma flap-dash, is all again
In ev'ry finew, nerve, and vein;
Runs here and there, like Hamlet's ghost,
While every where the rules the roast. Prior.
- ROB. n. f. [I believe Arabick.] Insipidated juices.
The infusion, being evaporated to a thicker consistence, passeth into a jelly, rob, extract, which contain all the virtues of the infusion. A. butnat on Aliments.
- To ROB. v. a. [rober, old Fr. robare, Italian.]
1. To deprive of any thing by unlawful force, or by secret theft; to plunder. 'To be robbed, according to the present use of the word, is to be injured by theft secret or violent; to rob, is to take away by unlawful violence; and to steal, is to take away privately.
Is't not enough to break into my garden,
And, like a thief, to come to rob my grounds,
But thou wilt brave me with these lawcy terms? Shakespeare.
 2. To set free; to deprive of something bad. Ironical.
Our fins being ripe, there was no preventing of God's justice from reaping that glory in our calamities, which we robbed him of in our prosperity. King Charles.
 3. To take away unlawfully.
I have not here designed to rob him of any part of that commendation, which he has so justly acquired from the whole author, whose fragments only fall to my portion. Dry.

love from any. Shakespeare.
- Procure, that the nourishment may not be robbed and drawn away. Bacon's Natural History.
- Nor will I take from any man his due;
But thus assuming all, he robs from you. Dryden.
- Oh double sacrilege on things divine,
To rob the relic, and deface the shrine! Dryden.
- ROBBERY. n. f. [from rob.] A thief; one that robs by force, or steals by secret means; a plunderer.
- These hairs, which thou dost ravish from my chin,
Will quicken and accuse thee; I'm your host;
With robbers hands, my hospitable favour
You should not ruffle thus. Shakespeare. King Lear.
- Barabbas was a robber. St. John.
- Had'st thou not committed
Notorious murder on those thirty men
At Ascalon; then, like a robber, strip'd'st them
Of their robes. Milton's Agonistes.
- The robber must run, ride, and use all the desperate ways of escape; and probably, after all, his sin betrays him to the goal, and from thence advances him to the gibbet. South.
- Bold Prometheus did aspire,
And stole from heav'n the seeds of fire;
A train of ills, a ghastly crew,
The robber's blazing track pursue. Dryden's Horace.
- ROBBERY. n. f. [robberie, old Fr. from rob.] Theft perpetrated by force or with privacy.
